

Both processes get their own copy of the parent's memory and continue running independently from right after the `fork()` call.